

CHEST. Stitches in chest from flatulent colic (which is inconsistent if not contradictory). Stitches in chest between the acts of respiration.

EXTREMITIES. Burning in heels (at night) which are cold to touch.

SLEEP. Feels tired after sound sleep. The fixed idea of his dream does not leave him on waking but continues in his mind.

FEVER. One type of fever changes to another. He is able to resume his work as soon as the attack is over; that is, the apyrexia is complete. External coldness with internal heat or vice versa. Thirst with chill but not with fever. Sweat only in face, which being an uncovered part is less likely to sweat. Perspiration while eating, while a more violent exertion probably would not cause it: this is similar to its symptom of aggravation from touch but amelioration from pressure. Sensation as though sweat would break out, but the contrary character of the drug shows itself in the fact that it does not. Redness of face during the chill, even when shaking with cold.

Added to all these peculiar contradictions is the symptom aggravation of his condition by being contradicted, which makes him angry and he feels worse.
